

TWO DAYS IN THE VALLEY

LEE: You know, people don't realize how important a minute is. So much life revolves around a single minute. You have a minute egg, a minute waltz, minute rice, people are always demanding you give them a minute. Nobody realizes how valuable it is until they only have one left. Wait. Just stand there a minute. I just want to look at you. God definitely broke the mold after you, baby.

HELGA: Tell that to my modeling agency.

LEE: The hell with them. You're not too tall. It's the world that's too short. God, you are beautiful! Oh, yeah! And when I asked Roy if you were the one who approached him on behalf of the North Koreans and he had 16 seconds to answer, I think he wet the bed.

HELGA: Why did you go through that ridiculous story -- just to torture him? Sometimes I really think you should have been born during the Spanish Inquisition.

LEE: Your minute is up.

HELGA: Lee Woods - Minuteman.

LEE: Lean back.

HELGA: Don't put your hand around my throat.

LEE: I think you like it a little bit.

HELGA: I don't. It makes me not trust you.

LEE: You can trust me. You can always trust me. Just like I trusted you with Roy. Which breast did he touch? This one?

HELGA: He didn't have to touch either one, the way it turned out. Why did you change your mind? I thought the whole idea of my having an affair with him was to lure him into the desert where we'd kill him.

But I know why you did it at Becky's house.

LEE: Why?

HELGA: You got jealous and let it get to you personally. You've never done that before.

LEE: I guess I must really be in love with you.
